

Industrial cattle and sheep farms program

Intervention Zone

All regions of Senegal

Description of the Project

Senegal is a country with a high consumption of meat products and this consumption is covered on average 95% by local production. The gap is filled by imports of live animals from neighboring countries. In view of a significant increase in national needs for red meat due to the expected strong population growth, it is crucial to strengthen the development of an intensive bovine sub-sector. This project aims to encourage the genetic improvement of cattle (beef breeds), animal feed, the emergence of fattening workshops and the establishment of modern slaughterhouse and butchery infrastructures.

Expected impact

- Increased cattle productivity
- Improving the processing and marketing of cattle
